Eight of the ten prisoners in the county jail were made sick last Friday by something they had eaten. It seems as though it would be better economy to provide wholesome food, even at higher price, than to have sick men in jail, so often requiring the services of a physician. The competitive system of feeding county patients and prisoners is wrong in principle.

Salter, night watchman at Roosevelt, beat an old man known as Scotty on the face and head with a heavy cane or club, breaking his nose in two places and inflicting other painful injuries.
